Thank you. I apologize for not knowing the group. I have two questions. First, will my name be used for any marketing purposes? Second, is it the case that a number of other finance academics have the same status and can you tell me who? Thanks again. -Cam

Dear Professor Harvey,

My name is George Mentz, and I am this years President of the American Academy of Financial Management AAFM

AAFM is a global self-regulatory organization for finance professionals that was started by Faculty, Financial Practitioners, and Executives. We have offices in Hong Kong, New Orleans and Brussels. AAFM has members in over 100 countries, is recognized worldwide, and is the fastest growing graduate financial organization in the world.

Our Board of Standards recently reached approval to offer Honorary Membership and The MFP Master Financial Professional Designation Award to select Faculty. As such, we annually vote to recognize some of the world's top financial faculty, and you have been selected by our Board to receive this honor. Additionally, AAFM is the first financial organization to reach an official recognition agreement of 435 AACSB Internationally accredited business schools worldwide. Moreover, AAFM is the first financial certification organization to be officially recognized by the Chinese Govt, the largest population in the world.

Thus, the reason for my email is to tell you a little about American Academy of Financial Management and to offer you The MFP Master Financial Professional Recognition along with Honorary AAFM Global Advisor Status. If you accept this recognition, please notify us by email, and we will send you your membership and certification award by mail to your preferred address using your selected name spelling.

Later, we will list you on our Global Advisors list. As mentioned, this is an honorary status, and the Global Advisor Status will not require your valuable time. Sincerely and Kindest Regards, George
